

Putting the knowledge to good use

Contributed by Datagod
Thursday, 12 June 2008
Last Updated Thursday, 12 June 2008

For the past 6 months I have been fairly quiet on this site. The reason for this is that I have been focusing my attention on learning FusionCharts and FusionWidgets charting tools for my masterpiece MyTinyStats.com.

I love this product, they really did a great job on putting it all together. Considering how many charts and gadgets they provide, the documentation is incredible. My favorite part, however, is in writing PHP code to translate MySQL query results into XML.

I have spent countless hours on this project and am very pleased to say that the hard work is paying off. Not only is MyTinyStats starting to look really great, but I am also able to start selling my services to other clients. The money I make all goes back into paying for the mucho hardware/software being used to hold my little web empire together.

So, if you are looking for some help with PHP, MySQL and FusionCharts, I am the man to talk to.